Perfume as expression, not accessory.

Spiteful August is an independent perfume house based in Spain, founded by Scott Wolf and Ryan Fox. It was created from a desire to challenge convention, exploring perfume as a form of creative expression rather than a pleasant accessory.

Every fragrance is conceived around a single central idea and carefully engineered to evolve over time, revealing different facets as it settles on the skin. Each composition is formulated, blended, macerated and bottled entirely by hand in our own studio by perfumer Scott Wolf.

The debut collection introduces three genderless Extrait de Parfum fragrances: Cárdá, Coya and Bohemia. Distinct in character yet united by a shared philosophy, each is designed to leave a lasting impression through originality, craftsmanship and emotional connection.

Independent in spirit and uncompromising in its creative direction, Spiteful August makes perfume for people who value identity over familiarity.

MANIFESTO

We do not just create perfumes to smell beautiful.

We create them to feel alive. To provoke. To challenge.

Where traditional houses aim for smoothness, harmony and instant likability, we lean into contradiction. Our perfumes live in the tense spaces between opposing states: clean and dirty, warm and cold, luminous and dark. We do not smooth away the difficult edges, and we do not over correct a raw or overripe opening to make it safe for the masses. We keep those imperfections on purpose, so each fragrance blooms out of tension rather than perfection.

They do not simply dry down on the skin. They evolve. They carry a pulse. Our perfumery comes from instinct rather than fashion, from raw desire rather than market demand. Our fragrances are unapologetically genderless. They belong to no one except the person wearing them.

Our debut collection will almost certainly divide people. It should. That is what genuine artistic identity looks like.

Two obsessives. One studio.

Spiteful August is the work of two people, Scott Wolf and Ryan Fox, operating from a single studio in southern Spain where every fragrance is composed, blended, matured and bottled by hand.

Every bottle is composed by self taught perfumer Scott Wolf, whose work is built not around technical perfection but around tension, atmosphere and slow transformation. He is less interested in the polished opening that sells a fragrance in its first ten seconds, and more in the journey: a scent that begins in one place and ends somewhere entirely unexpected.

The house was built on friction rather than harmony. Two uncompromising people, two definitions of perfection, one shared instinct for fragrance that provokes rather than pleases. Nothing is rushed and nothing is outsourced. Each composition is allowed to fight until it becomes exactly what it needs to be, then left to macerate before it is ever poured.

*I want movement. Friction. Tension.
I want a scent to begin in one place and end somewhere completely unexpected.*

Cárda

AROMATIC GOURMAND

Cárda begins with a single, uncompromising idea: cardamom, taken further than it is usually allowed to go.

It opens with a raw, almost confrontational dose of aromatic cardamom that quickly breaks into a green, exotic brightness. At its heart, the juicy sweetness of ripe Williams pear softens the spice into something sparkling and unexpected. As it settles on the skin, bourbon vanilla and a clean, radiant woodiness turn the early heat into a quiet, sherbet like glow.

Bold at first meeting and disarming by the end. A fragrance for those who would rather be remembered than understood at once.

Coya

CITRUS WOODY

Coya is a study in light, warmth and modern simplicity.

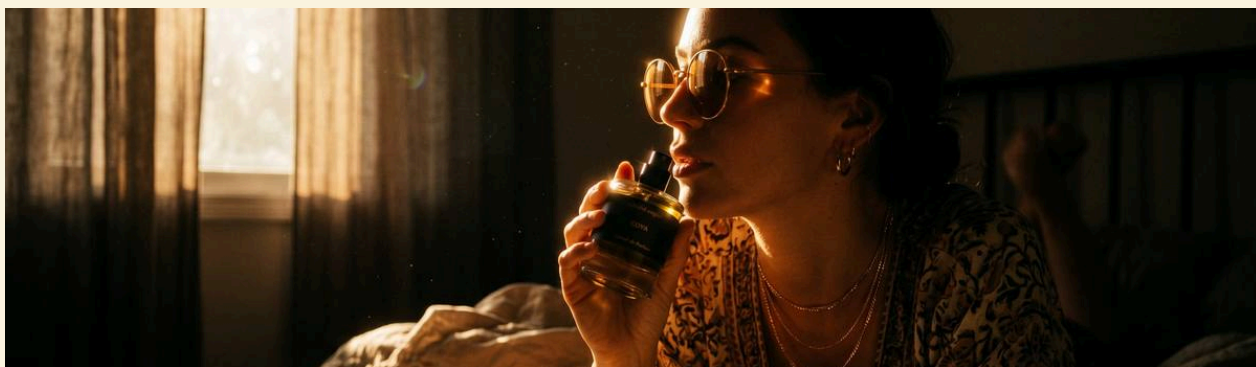

It begins with an explosion of vibrant green mandarin, bright and full of energy, before revealing a transparent heart of radiant florals and clean woods. The freshness never feels sharp or fleeting. It melts slowly into the skin, becoming softer, warmer and increasingly intimate. As it develops, luminous musks, creamy woods and smooth amber create the sensation of sun warmed skin at the end of a long summer day.

Bright without being fleeting. Warm without becoming heavy. A contemporary citrus designed to feel as natural as skin itself.

Bohemia

WOODY GOURMAND

Bohemia is an unapologetically sensual interpretation of patchouli.

It opens with an earthy richness that challenges expectation. Dark Indonesian patchouli is wrapped in creamy coconut, a texture that feels raw, humid and almost skin like from the first spray. As it settles, the darker edges soften. Warm woods, smooth vanilla and soft musks emerge, turning the composition into something intimate, comforting and quietly addictive.

Bohemia celebrates the beauty of contrast. Bold yet comforting. Rustic yet refined. A modern patchouli that feels both timeless and deeply personal.

Nothing is rushed.

Every Spiteful August fragrance is created with the philosophy that shaped the house from the beginning: complete creative independence.

Each formula is developed exclusively for Spiteful August and personally composed by perfumer Scott Wolf. From the first trial through to the finished bottle, every stage of the process remains under one roof. Our fragrances are formulated, blended, matured and bottled by hand in small batches, allowing every detail to be controlled before it reaches the customer.

We work only with high quality raw materials from respected suppliers, and manufacture in accordance with European cosmetic regulations. Every fragrance undergoes the required safety assessments before release.

*Nothing is outsourced.
Nothing is created to follow a trend.*
